Statement of Significance Located along the Case Road near what was historically McCorkle Road (113th Ave SW), the Scott/Wright Property has a cobblestone well. The mounting stone was previously in county right-of-way and has now been moved to the Tibbetts' property . According to an Abstract of Title owned by the Tibbetts, the property was Homesteaded by Joseph M. and Nancy Scott. They received their Homestead Patent in 1869. Scott and his wife divorced in 1879. In 1884 Joseph and Mary Scott sold their property to William & Sarah Littlejohn Wright (160 acres.) Joseph Scott died in 1884. Wright, a Delaware native, arrived in Washington Territory in 1854. His wife, Sarah Littlejohn Wright was a member of the pioneer Tumwater family. She came from Indiana as a child to Washington Territory in 1852. Wright and his wife were in the Indian service and spent several years at Fort Simcoe in Eastern Washington and on the Skokomish reservation. Wright was a harnessmaker. The Wright family owned the property until 1927 when Fannie and Ada Wright, daughters of William Wright, sold the property to Ophir Investment Company. They sold it in 1934 to E. J. and A. J. Sinnes who sold the property to George and Beatrice Nesbitt. The Nesbitts sold the property to the current owners Melvin and Mildred Tibbetts in 1944. The Tibbetts' operated a dairy, grew loganberries, sold eggs and grew turkeys on the property.

The Tibbetts planted the large trees on the property including the black walnut tree (next to Case Road), chestnut tree and the butternut tree. Mr. Tibbetts recalls that the black walnut tree blew down during the Columbus Day Storm in 1962 and he righted the tree and it continued to grow. The Tibbetts used the well on the property for a time and have since dug a well adjacent to the original hand-dug cobblestone well and filled the old well in. The original well could date from the ownership of the Scott family at the site. The mounting stone and horse ring probably date from the period of ownership of the Wright family since they are concrete. Albert Wright the oldest son was married to Ruth Bigelow. Mary Ann Bigelow recalls visiting the house and that the mounting stone was near the road.

Description of Physical Appearance Concrete structure measuring three feet high with three steps. A metal horse tethering ring is attached. The well is a hand-dug, cobblestone lined well.
